THE ROAD

TO A MAN'S

HEART.

By JENNIE LEE.

Copyrighted 1908, by Associated

Literary Press.

Elizabeth Hardestie Yorkie of Richmond, Va., has moved to the exclusive town of Middleville. She was a widow of twenty-seven and was a descendant of the first families of Virginia, and never for a minute did she let you forget the deep line of her blood, the devotion of her late lamented husband and the amount of money she once had.
Middleville turned by its rose figu-rally when she settled in its midst, while the inhabitants did the same thing literally. Elizabeth's manner was too imperious for their northern Independence; she laughed too much for a widow bowed in grief, and the fact that her old colored mammy called her "Miss Elizabeth" made them almost doubt whether a Mr. Yorkie had ever existed.

The only thing which could be said in her favor was that she attended church regularly and contributed liberally to all the festivals. Such was the tolerant situation when the Rev.
Dr. Botcher called to make his parochial visit.

"I'm so glad you came to see me," Elizabeth was saying. "I always did love ministers. They're so old fashioned and queer."

The Rev. Dr. Botcher had been twirling his cane as an inspiration to starting an agreeable bit of conversation.
At this speech he stopped twirling it and grasped its handle somewhat firmly.

"Really, do you?" was the sum total of his answer.

"Supper is just this minute ready, doctor," continued Elizabeth. "Lay down that foolish old cane and come in and have some of mammy's blueberry cakes. They'll just make you wish you never had to go home."

The man made some weak comment about not expecting to stay, but he was swayed into the cool dining room and was eating cake and sipping tea before he could reconnoiter.

"I really came to see about those flowers planted along the line of your lawn," began the doctor.

"Aren't they just too lovely?" chimed in Elizabeth. "My husband used to say I had a most artistic eye for color."

"Yes, they are pretty; but you see they are planted on the lawn that belongs to Mrs. Murray—over your line, you see."

"Yes, I believe she has been saying something to that effect," said the charming widow. "But I thought it was awfully odd of me to fix up her place so prettily even if it was encroachment. Don't you?"

"Well, I hadn't looked at it that way," agreed her divine company.
"But really I must be going home, as we have prayer meeting tonight."

Mrs. Yorkie bade her visitor good night and urged him to drop in again any time he was hungry for cakes. Elizabeth was smiling to herself with some thing of satisfaction when she heard footsteps on her porch. She went to the open door and met Mr. Murray, husband, and evidently the much lesser half of Mrs. Murray, her next door neighbor.

"How perfectly lovely of you to call, Mr. Murray," exclaimed Elizabeth as she extended her hand to add to her cordial welcome.

"Er—yes—that is, I came over about that row of dahlias you planted over there on our—"

"Oh, that's all right," interrupted Elizabeth. "You're quite welcome to them. You see, I have so many, and I want my neighbors to enjoy some of them. But, dear me, do sit down, and I'll call mammy to give us something to eat." And she disappeared, to return in a few minutes.

At her heels came the dear old mammy laden with a tray of raspberry shrub and a huge coconut cake that looked like a ball of snow.

Mr. Murray found himself seated before an old hickory table in an armchair eating cake and drinking the shrub. "Finding himself" may seem an inadequate explanation of how he got there, but that is what he told Mrs. Murray on his return home.

Mrs. Murray was watching the couple from the corner of her own veranda, and when Mr. Murray returned smacking his lips and Mrs. Murray noticed a flake of coconut on his vest she called him to account for his fruitless call.

Saturday noon found Elizabeth digging among her flowers. Her sweet voice was humming "Way Down in Carolina," and as she sifted from one rosebush to another she looked almost like some white spirit among the gardens of earth. Her task was interrupted by mammy.

"Miss Elizabeth, de town mayor done call. Come right in, honey, and see what he want."

Elizabeth gathered up in her arms the roses she had been cutting for the house and walked around to the front of the cottage. The town mayor was good to look upon. The greatest compliment that Elizabeth could pay him was the silent comment she made to herself—that he did not look like the rest of Middleville.

"Is this 'Mr. Yorkie'?" asked the man as she approached.

"It certainly is," acknowledged Elizabeth as she bowed before him. "And this is Mr. Mayor—shall I call you?"

"My name is Waring," announced the mayor as he met the piercing gaze of the widow. "I came on a rather important errand. You see, I receive all the complaints of the townspeople, and Mrs. Murray, your neighbor, you know."

"Isn't she a dear?" exclaimed Elizabeth. "Such a nice neighbor! But come along in to luncheon, for man-ny's popovers will be spoiled if we stand here much longer."

Waring said he wasn't hungry.
"That's just the point," cried Elizabeth, with enthusiasm. "You will be if you come into the house the small mammy's popovers, corn pudding and, best of all, ice cold mint juleps! Come right along and tell me your complaints at the table."

"That Mrs. Yorkie," interrupted Waring. "I can't think of imposing on a stranger in this way."

"Imposing?" echoed Elizabeth. "Law-dy me! If you know how glad I am to have some one to eat with me!" She dropped into a chair at the table and motioned him to the other.

As a boy Waring had visited in the south and had never ceased talking about the corn pudding which even his mother could never make with any degree of success.

Mammy's corn pudding was the same kind as that which he had eaten in years gone by, and instead of the complaints of his townspeople the mayor told most interesting tales of his boy-hood—how he had roamed from one state to another, how he loved the south and its people, how he had settled in Middleville and taken up polite farming to kill time and how the people had made him mayor.

Not until after luncheon, when the mayor and the widow were seated on the shady porch and Waring caught sight of Mrs. Murray leaning over the hedge of dahlias, did he remember why he was a guest of Mrs. Yorkie. Believing in the eternal fitness of things, Waring realized that this was not the time to push his complaint, and he left after many hearty "thanks and more complimentary speeches."

Sunday morning found the altar in the little church laden with dahlias—some red and white blossoms, hanging their heads in reverence to the text, taken from the twenty-third chapter of the Psalms and the third verse, "Do not despoil of his duties, seeing they are deceitful men."

Waring attended church as part of the duties of his office, and this Sunday he walked home with his hostess of yesterday. He wanted to leave her at the gate, but Elizabeth protested.

"Do come in as an act of charity," you see, I've not been well, and our old home doctor ordered me to some quiet country place to rest up. So mammy and I landed here. But, oh, I'm just nearly dead with homesickness, although I do feel the change has done me good. Come along and have a bit of our fried chicken, won't you?"

He came that day, and he came again.

The women of Middleville were still speechless of Mrs. Yorkie, but in mixed debates the men stood up for her, and some of the married men went so far as to say disagreeable things to their wives.

The mayor was seldom at his office, he was seldom found at home, and the day came when he must be seen at once. Mr. Murray knew where to find him and hurried down the street toward Mrs. Yorkie's little cottage. Just at the gate he met the Rev.
Dr. Botcher, about to make his second call on the new parishioner. Together they walked down the broad lane.

They were not disappointed. The widow and the mayor were on the porch together.

"We were just talking about you," exclaimed Elizabeth as she greeted the minister.

"Just in time," called out Waring, and the newcomers noted the blush that overspread the already pink cheeks of Elizabeth.

Mr. Murray lost no time in telling Waring what he wanted.

"But you know I resigned my office last week. You see, I'm going on a long trip," announced Waring.

"Trip?" echoed Dr. Botcher. "Surely you're not starting on another one of those lonely globe trotting trips of yours, Jack?"

"This one won't be lonesome, 'cause I'm going to take a wife along to cheer me up. That's what we were talking about when you came along. How about a little wedding in the church, eh?"

They could not see the beaming face of Elizabeth, for her back was turned to them. She was busily engaged in spreading a white cloth over the hickory table in the corner of the porch, and mammy was making various trips back and forth to her own mysterious storehouse.

Origin of the Postal System.

The wonderful postal system, which has reached out until it includes every country on the face of the earth, had its beginning in the mind of an illegitimate Frenchman.

In 1658, early in the reign of Louis XIV., M. de Velayer established a private penny post. Boxes were set up at the street corners for the reception of letters, and offices were opened in various quarters of Paris. Collections were made once a day from the street boxes, followed many hours later by a single delivery, and thus the first postoffice in the world was established.

M. de Velayer was so greatly encouraged by the success of his enterprise that in order to develop it still further he printed certain forms of tickets or notes which were intended to cover all the ordinary requirements of business in great towns. These forms contained blanks which were intended to be filled up by the recipient with such special matter as might be necessary to complete the writer's object. The idea at once became popular, and the printed forms accompanied the expansion of the postal service throughout the larger cities of France, and it was many years before they fell into disuse.

A Famous Poison Mystery.

England had a famous poison mystery in the last century. Two members of a great club in Manchester, both men of position and keen politicians, each received a note containing a few chairs of the very highest quality apparently. Both were taken fearfully ill after smoking, and one of them subsequently died. The cigars were found to be loaded with poison, and it was said that the man who received only one died because he used a cigar holder. The facts were at first hushed up, because, as was said, the suspected smoker, whose motive was revenge on account of a lady, was a man of wealth and power. But this subject was cleared, and the mystery was deepened by the following circumstances: A rich Manchester merchant, traveling one day in a railway car about the time of the incident related, got into conversation with a most agreeably and highly cultivated stranger, who directly offered his cigar case. The Manchester man was found at Leeds almost unconscious and the only occupant of the carriage. He grasped in one of his convulsed hands the cigar he had been smoking, and after analysis showed it to be identical with the others. He recovered, but the stranger was never discovered.

Easy Way to Be Generous.

In a church of a New England village was an old man who had all the Christian graces save one, and that was the grace of liberality. He would do anything in the world for the cause of religion but give up his money. At the close of the financial year 1830 the church found itself $100 in debt.
A church meeting was called, and it was voted to circulate a subscription paper on the spot and endeavor to thus make the sum needed. This was done, and the old gentleman did not put his name on the paper. The result was rather discouraging, $200 only having been pledged. Silence reigned for a moment, when one of the most generous men in the church moved that "we double our subscriptions." Instantly the old gentleman was in his feet and with extraordinary fervor cried, "I second the motion."

He evidently felt that he was thus doing his part in hastening a most desirable result.

Banquo's Ghost of American Politics.

A story is going the rounds of the press on Wm. Jennings Bryan's lack of comprehension in which he is likened to the fellow who went to a dance and was first asked to leave, then put out, then thrown out, and finally kicked out before he realized that he was not wanted. We beg leave to remark that it would take more than any of these to make Bryan realize that he is not wanted by the people of the United States. Not until he talks himself out or leaves this mundane sphere via the air-shuttle route will Bryan cease to be the Banquo's ghost of American politics.

On the other hand the story being told from Republican rostrums about the reputed Democrat who was going to vote for Taft this time, because he could vote for Bryan any old time, is illustrative of the feelings of all good Americans who believe they have the opportunity this election to get an extraordinary man for President. He is so valuable an asset that he never could become a chronic office seeker, and we can thank the turn of affairs which has placed his talent and capacity at the disposal of the American people. He might have drifted into other channels, for there have been great men who would have made splendid Presidents who missed the flood tide which might have led them thither.

Hunting Privileges Should Be Free for All.

THE killing of the boy hunter in the marshes of Alvarado by the keeper for a gun club is a terrible thing, involving as it does an innocent lover of sports and an over-zealous servant of the rich, who found himself charged with manslaughter for doing the bidding of his masters. A man has a right to keep trespassers from his property, but there should be a distinction between property of this character and the monopolizing of preserves for the exclusive use of those who have no more right but the financial advantage of getting game. The killing was, of course, unintentional, but the shots were fired with intent to rid the premises of trespassers at whatever cost. The sacrifice of human life to keep up the "class" of a gentleman's club is something which should not be tolerated by any State in this country, and as it is hard to govern the methods by which these clubs are conducted and the game preserved, measures should be taken to stop the privilege of holding land or ponds for such purposes. Let the hunting privileges be a free for all game governed only by our laws, which protect the perpetuating of the species.

Has Troubles of Her Own.

LOS ANGELES is not perfect, despite the declarations of its residents, for we are beginning to hear new and spicy accounts of graft inquiry and mistakes in the selling of the bonds for the improved roads. The Grand Jury of the City of the Angels is inquiring into the Sheriff's office, Board of Supervisors, Police Department and Police Commissioners. It is rumored that county and federal prisoners meals have not been square, and the deputies expenses have been too high. The Angelic Supervisors have been flying too high, according to their expense accounts, and the police have been giving protection to law breakers. If all these charges are proven, we northerners can chuckle sympathetically.

Pitiful in the Extreme

THE explanation of the Democratic editor of the "Expositor" for supporting J. K. Bigelow, the candidate for Supervisor who has ignored the platform of the Republican county convention which honored him with the nomination, is pitiable in the extreme to one who knows the true reasons. Of this, however, more anon.

On the Latest Invention

What freak conceived of a girlless typewriter?
Alas! such a change we deplore, For wives will insist, since it cannot be kissed, That we order straightway one or more.

Whoever thought out such a substitute crude Must have been a crabbed old cad Provoked at the thoughts of smiles that we got And chances he never had.

Only Thing for Them to Do

ABOUT the only thing for Republicans to do in the matter of voting for Supervisor of this district is to cast their ballots for Blair Hart, the Democrat nominee. We, the Republicans, have a candidate in name only, as candidate Bigelow has deserted the ranks and is electioneering on an independent, one-man insurgent platform. Far better vote for a candidate who stands by his party platform than to cast a ballot for a man who sets himself up above the party that honored him.

THE attention of our taxpayers is called to the account of a San Francisco policeman who extorted $25 out of a country visitor in Golden Gate Park. Sonoma ain't nothing like this with Jim Albertson on the force.

A MAN named Singer divided up $16,000,000 between his four children—a mere song.

OUR ERRATIC SENSES

Some of the Curious Facts Recorded by Physiologists.

THE PHENOMENA OF SOUND.

Squeals of Mice and the Lowest Notes of an Organ are Inaudible to Some Persons—Peculiarities of the Delicate Sense of Smell.

If you shade the eyes, you weaken your sense of hearing. Try it with a watch and the result will surprise you. If you sip a glass of cold water, you will suppress for a short time your power of vision. If you fill the mouth with water, you will greatly strengthen your sense of smell.

Many similar curious facts about the senses are told by physiologists.

There is a multitude of sounds made in the world every day, for instance, which we cannot hear, however close they may be. Every sound must last a certain time in order to be heard by the ear. If it is an extremely feeble sound it must last quite two seconds or we cannot hear it. But, no matter how long it lasts, we cannot hear it if it is a very low or a very high note. Extremely small animals emit such high notes that we never hear them. Some people cannot even hear the squeal of mice. The lowest notes of an organ are mere rumbling noises to most people, and some cannot hear them at all.

It is by means of the external ear we judge the direction from which sound comes. Stand facing a clock, place your hands in front of your ears, with the palms turned back, close your eyes; you will then think the clock is behind you.

Why can some animals smell more keenly than others? It is a question of the space within the nose capable of smelling. In man this space is very small—less than one-fourth of a square inch. In dogs and most mammals it is very much larger. The porpoise has no sense of smell. Then comes man, and also the monkeys, whales and all kinds of fowl and birds, with very feeble smelling power. When people talk of vultures scenting dead bodies they make a mistake. Lions, tigers, wolves, etc., can scent them at long distances, but vultures depend on their sense of sight.

The sense of smell is exceedingly delicate. If one ounce of musk were divided into 15,000,000,000 parts one of these infinitesimal parts would be perceptible by the average person's nose. On the other hand, many people have no power to smell some substances, such as nitenonette, vanilla, violets and prussic acid.

Taste is curious in the fact that different parts of the tongue appreciate different flavors. At the tip we perceive sweet tastes best, at the sides acid tastes and at the back bitter tastes. Substances must be dissolved in order to be tasted, and a dry morsel in a dry mouth has no flavor. This is why smokers cannot taste well. Their mouth glands, which manufacture saliva, are paralyzed by the tobacco. Very hot or very cold things are scarcely tasted at all. If you want to get the best flavor from your food it must be at some temperature between 50 and 95 degrees.

Every one knows how easily the sense of sight is deceived by optical puzzles. But a curious deception is practiced on us all throughout our lives, and no one ever perceives it. There is a blind spot in the eye where the optic nerve enters. In everything we look at, therefore, there is a little gap where we see nothing. But no one is aware of it, because it has been the case since we first opened our eyes.

In estimating distance we judge by the experience we gain in walking. The eye itself cannot judge distances. A near hill and a distant mountain will each form an image of the same size on the eye. We know the mountain is farther away than the hill because there are more intervening objects. But we can often make an estimate of distance, in a curious way, by the muscles of the eyeball. In order to focus a near object we must bulge the lens, and to focus a distant object we must flatten the lens. The amount of muscular labor used in doing this gives us an idea of the distance of the object.

A man seems much thinner in dark than in light clothing. All black things, in fact, appear smaller than white things of the same size. An image remains on the eye for some time after looking at an object. If the thing is very bright the image remains a long time, and sometimes if you look directly at the sun you will carry the image of it around with you for days.

Color blind people have a defective muscular sense. They confuse different notes, and, curiously, the confusion of green blind people differs from the confusion of red blind people. Colors strengthen the sense of taste. Red apples and tomatoes and strawberries and green pickles taste better than the selfsame vegetables and fruit when they are paler.

For feeling we have a variety of nerves. Some spots on the skin feel pain, some warmth, some cold and some simple touch. The tip of the finger has a much better sense of touch than the forearm and the forearm is far better than the foot. In the white of the eye we can feel neither touch, heat nor cold—only pain alone—but the red lining of the eyelids can feel scarcely anything but cold. The mouth, as every one knows, can only feel or coffee at a temperature that would give great pain to the hands or feet.

Conscientious About It. "Mr. Glizzard," asked the caller, "are you carrying all the life insurance you can afford?"

"No," answered the man at the desk, "I can afford more, and I had expected to take out more, but from a note I got from my employer this morning I have begun to suspect that I'm carrying a good deal more than I am worth."—Chicago Tribune.

Forcing a Success. "What is the name of your new novel?" "The Dungeon." Good gloomy title, eh?

"Yes. That name alone ought to get the book among the six best sellers."—Washington Herald.

Nothing Liberal About It. Wilkins—I understand you are giving your son a liberal education? Hobbs—Liberal! Not a bit of it! They don't give anything away at the college where he is. I have to pay for every plaything he gets.—Boston Transcript.

Thoughtfulness. Mr. Saphrodite—I like to be different from other people. Miss Canstine—That is very considerate of you. I dare say the other people appreciate your thoughtfulness.—Philadelphia Record.

Sarcastic. He—Look at this infernal bill. You know I can't afford it. Now, I'm going to give you a piece of my mind. She—Are you quite sure you can afford that, papa, dear?—London Opinion.

Economy may be the road to wealth, but a large number of people will refuse to travel it until the road roars movement has made it smoother.—Washington Herald.

Try This For Catarrh.

Free tests are now being supplied by mail to all Catarrh sufferers. There is no expense—no obligation whatever. Dr. Shoop is combining Oil of Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, Oil of Wintergreen, etc., and is incorporating these ingredients into a pure, snow-white cream-like Imported Petroleum. This Cream—Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy—gives immediate and lasting relief to catarrh of the nose and throat. That all may first test it free, these trial boxes are being mailed without charge, simply to encourage these tests and thus fully demonstrate, beyond doubt, the value of this combination. If Catarrh has extended down to the stomach or bowels, then Dr. Shoop's Restorative must also be used internally. If a complete cure is to be expected, otherwise the Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy will alone be entirely sufficient. Write Dr. Shoop, Kacine, Wis. for sample and book. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

PRINTERS' BLUNDERS.

Comic Effects Frequent in the Days When Bad Copy Was the Rule. Typographical errors that produced weird or comical effects are described by the St. Louis Republic in an article recalling the days when all of that newspaper's type was set by hand, before the introduction of typesetting machines, when the copy, instead of being typewritten, was turned over to the printer in an infinite variety of good, bad and indifferent orthography.

Comparatively few of the errors were allowed to contribute to the gayety of the subscribers, as the majority were squelched in the "house of correction," as the proofroom was facetiously termed. From a collection made by a proofreader the following instances of ridiculous misreading of copy are taken:

"His blushing bride" was transformed into "his blustering bride."

A captain was said to have "served with destruction in the Confederate army," but the writer thought he wrote "distinction."

Two pictures entitled "The Galley Slave" and "Each in Their Turn" were referred to as "The Galley I Love" and "Enoch in Shin Town."

Having in mind the influence of former citizens of the land of the shamrock upon the political destinies of the town, what more natural than that the printer man should set up an "Irish district court" where it had been the "first district court?"

Professor Frank Geeks was mentioned as having rendered "violent selections" rather than "vicious selections."

Somebody was quoted as saying that "all the singing folks on the vaudeville stage have hundreds of wives," but the copy, when carefully examined, was found to read "husbands or wives," and a sensation in the theatrical world was averted.

"They sailed for three days around the cape and finally slaughtered a small Italian" was corrected to read "sighted a small island."

On one occasion the reporter wrote of certain "dwarfed and hunched children," who were made to appear perhaps more pathetic when the compositor substituted the words "doofted and hunched."

"He takes delight in talking on his family shame" was a shameful thing to say about him, for "favorite theme" was meant.

"Red Cross Society Will Fight Corbett" was the way the typesetter transformed the copy concerning a crusade against cholera.

AN HONEST ARTIST.

He Would Not Paint a Lie Even For a Napoleon.

There was no love lost between the Emperor Louis Napoleon and his cousin, Prince Napoleon, whom the Parisians called "Pon Pon." The prince used to make abusive speeches against the emperor, which people were only too ready to repeat to him. "Let him alone," Louis Napoleon would reply. "He is too well known. No one would turn me out to place him on the throne."

The emperor was correct, for no one said a good word about "Pon Pon." He was commonly believed to have shown the white feather in the Crimea and never exposed himself where the lead was falling. An English lady who in her younger days mingled with French society told in her "Foreign Courts and Foreign Homes" a story as discreditable to Prince Napoleon as it is honorable to a French artist.

While the artist was painting the historical picture of the battle of the Alma, which the emperor had ordered, Prince Napoleon called at the painter's studio to make known to him the facts. On leaving he said he wished the prominent figure in the battle to be himself mounted on his white charger. He sent the horse to the artist, so that he could paint his exact portrait. When the picture was finished and invitations were sent out for a "private view," the white charger was seen, a prominent figure in the battle, but without a rider.

On hearing of this terrible omission the prince sent an aide-camp to ask the reason. The honest artist said the horse should remain if the prince wished, but no rider would be on it. "Tell the prince I have never yet painted a lie," the hint was taken. The prince ordered the horse to be rubbed out.

Fortunate, Indeed. Cook—Taylor was always a fortunate man, but doesn't it seem wonderful that his luck should stay with him to the very last?

Raleigh—How was that? Cook—Why, he was operated on for the removal of a pearl which he had accidentally swallowed while eating oysters, and when the pearl was examined it was found to be valuable enough to pay for both the operation and the funeral.—Judge.

A Favored Fowl. "I have been told," said Miss Miami Brown, "that the parrot is one of the longest lived birds that is."

"I statement," replied Mr. Erasmus Phibkey, "is strictly ornithological."

"I wonder why?" "I speak that one reason why do parrot lives so long is that he ain't good to eat."—Washington Star.

Giving Money. The difficulty which is faced in America in connection with philanthropy is not to find the people who have the money to give, but to discover the ways in which money may be given wisely. Ideas for wise giving are much scarcer than money awaiting opportunity.—Chicago Tribune.
